TELL IT LIKE IT IS

IN HIS REVIEW of Edward Jay Epstein's News from Nowhere (Book World, March 25), Douglas Stewart says it is "surprising" that Epstein, the author of a good book about the Warren Commission, should have now turned out a study that offers not a rebuttal of White House criticism of the media but "pallid if unhappy agreement."

Correction: what is surprising is that your reviewer believes that despite the conclusions reached by author Epstein after exhaustive research, author Epstein should have in fact written the opposite and rebutted the White House.

This sort of upside down reasoning tells us a lot about the bias of the man you chose to review this book which tells it like it is and unfortunately, from your point of view, gives aid and comfort to the White House.
